

The Bedroom Ghost:

The family involved related the following to us:

Alamosa, Colorado. The couple moved into the home in 1993. They did not witness any paranormal activity until recently (2002). The occurrences described here began shortly after their son turned two. The mother and father of Jay sat in the living room watching television. Jay, their only child was playing in his newly renovated bedroom that shared a common room with the living room. The parents heard Jay playing and moving his toys and as they tuned into his activities they realized that what was occurring was not childhood prattle but a definite conversation. John smiled at his wife and shouted to Jay, "Hey who are you playing with" after a short silence they heard the reply "a little girl." The parents were overcome with curiosity and walked into his bedroom to find Jay seated in the middle of his room alone.

A couple of days later shortly after midnight the parents were awakened to the sound of the toy telephone being played with in Jay's room. They arose and walked down the hallway to put the boy back to bed. To their surprise, the lights were out in his room. When the lights were turned on the room was empty. A quick dash to the living room found the boy sleeping on the couch. From that day forward, Jay would not sleep in his bedroom. He now wanders into the living room and sleeps on the couch every night. When asked by his parents about this behavior his reply was "because of the Monsters." Due to this situation, the parents became much more aware of the atmosphere in the house. They tried to determine what could be frightening their son or perhaps coincidentally, the activities started to escalate at this time. Several friends reported that they noticed strange shadows in motion out of the corner of their eyes. They also said that they felt uncomfortable in the little boy's room. None of the neighbor kids would sleep in Jay's room during sleepovers.

Judy the mother, started to have nightmares. She would dream that there were strange shadows floating around her bed. She would wake up John by screaming the "they are at the end of the bed" John would jump out of the bed and look around, seeing nothing he would look back at his wife whose eyes were wide open and she was shaking with fear. She explained that there were two shadowy figures. They did not do anything threatening but she was afraid of them. These nighttime incidents have been repeated periodically ever since then.

John seemed to be immune to these events until one night when he was sleeping. He always sleeps on his side facing the hallway their son's room. He does not recall why he woke up, he just "sensed something" He opened his eyes and there just a few inches from his face was a little girl standing next to the bed. John was shortly frozen and the vision just vanished.
